Welcome to Melaka

Melaka's appeal lies in its rich and colourful past. Its 600 years of history is reflected in its ancient buildings, intriguing streets, delectable cuisine and unique cultural heritage.

In the 16th century, Melaka enjoyed a reputation as the foremost maritime trading centre in the region. Merchants came from as far as Arabia, China, India and Europe to conduct trade in silk, spices, gold and porcelain.

So coveted was Melaka by the European powers that it was ruled successively by the Portuguese, Dutch and the British until the Federation of Malaya was formed on the 31st of August 1957.

Come visit Melaka and take a nostalgic journey into its glorious past.

Melaka's Glorious Past

Melaka's history began in 1403 with the arrival of Parameswara, an exiled Hindu Prince from the Kingdom of Sri Vijaya in Sumatra. He assumed the title of Raja Iskandar when he embraced Islam and became the first ruler of this new kingdom, which marked the early beginnings of the Sultanate of Melaka.

In time, Melaka gained prominence as a vibrant maritime trading centre and was coveted by several foreign powers. The Portuguese led by Alfonso d' Albuquerque conquered Melaka in 1511 and colonised it for 130 years. The Dutch then came in 1641 and ruled for 154 years. They were followed by the British in 1824 who ruled until the country gained its independence. Melaka also experienced Japanese occupation from 1942 to 1945. After World War Two, nationalistic sentiments began to spread culminating in the proclamation of independence on the 31st of August 1957.

Modern Melaka set on a course of industrial development about two decades after independence and forges ahead in its vision to be a fully industrialised state by the year 2010.

Historical Heritage

Insights of the past can be gleaned from Melaka's ancient relics that abound in the historical city.

Porta de Santiago (A'Famosa)

This prominent landmark in Melaka was a fortress built by the Portuguese admiral, Alfonso d'Albuquerque in 1511. It was badly damaged during the Dutch invasion in 1641. Timely intervention by Sir Stamford Raffles, a British official, in 1808 saved what remains of the A'Famosa today.

Admission is free. Tel: 06-288 3599

St. Paul's Church

The church was built on a hill in 1521 by Duarte Coelho, a Catholic Portuguese captain. It was later renamed St. Paul's Church by the Dutch. St. Francis Xavier was buried in the open grave here in 1553 before his body was transferred to Goa in India. The church has a commanding view of Melaka.

St. Francis Xavier's Church

A Catholic French priest, Rev. Farve, built the Gothic-style church in 1849. He dedicated it to St. Francis Xavier who was known as 'The Apostle of the East' for his missionary endeavours in Southeast Asia during the 16th century.*

St. Peter's Church

Built in 1710 during the Dutch occupation, it is the oldest Roman Catholic church in Malaysia.

It was built on a piece of land donated by a Dutch gentleman, Maryber Franz Amboer. Its façade and décor is a combination of Eastern and Western architecture. One of its bells was cast in Goa in 1608. The church is the venue for events like Good Friday, Easter Sunday processions and San Pedro's feast. *

Discover Melaka's past at the Stadthuys

The Stadthuys

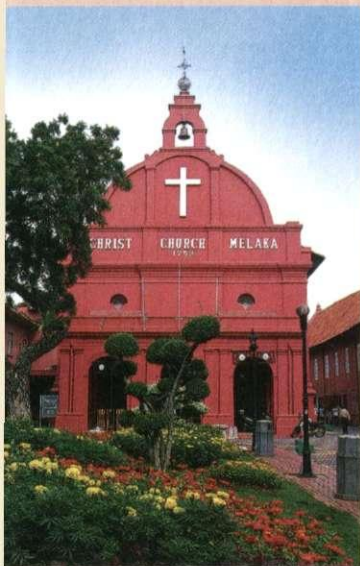

*Visitors are advised to dress appropriately and to obtain permission to enter from church officials.

Stadthuys

A major landmark in Melaka, the Stadthuys was built in 1650 as the official residence of Dutch governors and their officers. Believed to be the oldest Dutch building in the East (circa 1641 and 1660), the Stadthuys houses the Museum of History and Ethnography. Originally white, it was given a striking salmon-red colour to match the nearby Christ Church.

Christ Church

Dutch Cemetery

The Dutch Cemetery was first used in the last quarter of the 17th century. Five Dutch graves and 33 British graves lie within its compound. Its use was in stages, between 1670 – 1682 and in 1818 – 1838. The cemetery was gazetted as a national monument under the Antiquities Act 1976.

Admission is free. Tel: 06-282 7464

St. John's Fort

Christ Church

Situated adjacent to the Stadthuys, this bright red structure is testimony to Dutch architectural ingenuity. Interesting features include the church's handmade pews, ceiling beams (constructed without joints), brass bible, tombstone (with Armenian inscriptions) and 'The Last Supper' in glazed tiles. When the British arrived they turned the building into an Anglican church and added a weathercock as well as a bell tower.

St. John's Fort

The fort is located on St. John's Hill, 3km from the city. It was originally a private Portuguese chapel dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Built by the Dutch during the third quarter of the 18th century, its cannon embrasures face inland as during that time, attacks on Melaka came mainly from hinterland instead of from the sea.

Bukit Cina

As the name implies, 'Chinese Hill' was the official settlement of the entourage that arrived with the Chinese Princess Hang Li Po. She was sent to Melaka by the Ming emperor to marry the Sultan, marking the advent of diplomatic relations between Melaka and China. The entourage stayed on this settlement until the Portuguese occupation in 1511. Today, Bukit Cina is believed to be one of the largest Chinese cemeteries outside China with many of the tombs dating back to the Ming Dynasty. Admission is free. Tel: 06-282 9343

Dato' Dol Said's Mausoleum

Dato' Dol Said, the ninth ruler of Naning, figured prominently in the Naning War against the British in 1831-1832. He defiantly opposed the imposition of tax on the district by the British. The war made Dato' Dol Said a hero of exceptional valour that earned him a permanent place in the history of Melaka. He was buried here at Taboh Naning, about 32km from Melaka city.

Captivating Cultures

Melaka's rich cultural heritage comes from its various ethnic groups who are proud of their historical links to the past.

The Malays

The Malays constitute the largest group of Melaka's population. Islam pervades their whole way of life, including their customs or adat. The social system of the Malays in Melaka is based on adat temenggong, which embraces a patriarchal tradition. This custom spread subsequently to other states in the peninsula.

Playing congkak, a traditional Malay boardgame

The Chinese

The Chinese community forms the second largest ethnic group in Melaka and most of them are involved in business and trading activities. The Peranakan or Straits-born Chinese form a unique subgroup. Also known as Baba-Nyonya, they are descendants of the Chinese who arrived in Melaka and married locals. Described as 'Chinese in spirit and Malay in form', they retain many Chinese customs but Malay is their mother-tongue. They have adopted the Malay-style of dressing.

The Indians

The Indians are another important group in Melaka's colourful racial mix. Within this group are the Melaka Chittys, descendants of wealthy traders from South India's Coromandel Coast who visited Melaka during the 15th century and married local women. This resulted in a unique culture where they speak and dress like the Malays but retain their religious practices. A small community, there are only about 250 of them in Gajah Berang.

The Portuguese-Eurasians

The Portuguese-Eurasian community number about 10,000 in Malaysia. About 2,600 live in Melaka in the Portuguese Settlement which dates to 1930. They speak cristang, an archaic Portuguese dialect, and are Roman Catholics. The settlement is a hive of activity during the Festa San Juang and Festa San Pedro celebrations.

Festa San Juang or Feast of St. John begins with a candlelight procession at St. John's Hill. It proceeds downhill to the Portuguese Settlement where a bonfire would be lit, food served and cultural performances held. A performance to look out for is the branyo, a lively Portuguese dance where performers recite poems while dancing.

Festa San Pedro or the Feast of St. Peter is a major annual celebration of the Portuguese fishing community. The event honours St. Peter, the patron saint of fishermen. The community celebrates the occasion with traditional games, cultural performances, food fairs, blessing of fishing boats and the best decorated boat contest.
